

WOMEN'S WAR!

MISSSES STELLA AND AMELIA SISTERNA FOUND GUILTY OF BATTERY.

Amelia Perichina Testifies that they Called her Vile Names and Pulled her Hair.

THE SISTERNA GIRLS SWEAR THAT THEY WERE NOT BROUGHT UP TO THE USE OF VILE LANGUAGE.

On Wednesday evening last, at the corner of Fourth and Delaware streets, after the shades of night had fallen, there was a battle royal between three young women, and the vilest kind of epithets were heaped upon the heads of all of them by each other, if the stories of the prosecuting witness and the two defendants can be believed.

There was no one about to witness the battle, consequently there was only the testimony of the participants to lead the jury to a verdict.

A summary of the case is as follows:

On Wednesday evening last the Sisterna girls accompanied a lady friend to the West Berkeley train which departs at 8 o'clock. They had just left their friend when Amanda Perichina and her Sunday beau came down Delaware street, the young lady going to see him off. The three girls, between whom there seems to be very little love, passed each other, the Sisterna girls on their way home and the Perichina girl on her way to the depot where she left her friend and walked back toward home. When she reached the Sisterna girls, she says, they were in an ugly mood and after calling her vile names assaulted her, knocking her down and kicking her, pulling her hair and otherwise maltreating her.

The Sisterna girls say that this story is false, that they were walking along slowly, conversing with each other, when the Perichina girl came along and interrupted their conversation and then called them vile names, and at the same time grabbing Amelia Sisterna by the throat and nearly choking her. At this juncture the younger Sisterna girl interfered and separated the other two.

As soon as this was done, so the Sisterna girls claim, the Perichina girl went out on the street and defied either one of them to come out one at a time, and she would make them look as though they had been run through a rock crusher.

The Sisterna girls declined to do this and wended their way home.

The Perichina girl, who was badly disfigured went home and treated her wounds as best she could but she could not heal her wounded feelings so the next morning she went before Judge Lord and swore to a complaint charging Della and Amelia Sisterna with battery.

A warrant was issued and the girls were taken into custody and their cases set for this morning at 10 o'clock. They demanded a jury and elected to be tried together. It took some little time to empanel the jury but that part of the business was accomplished and the case went on.

The People were represented by Deputy District Attorney Moore and the defendants by W. E. Atchison.

Amanda Perichina was the first witness called and she testified in substance as follows:

My name is Amanda Perichina. I reside in Berkeley. On Wednesday evening last I walked down to the train with a gentleman friend of mine, who had been calling upon me. When I reached the corner of Fourth and Delaware streets I met the Sisterna girls. Just at this moment the gentleman whom I was walking with said something which caused me to laugh outright. We walked on to the train and I left him and started back to go to my home. When I got up Delaware street just above Munday's saloon, the Sisterna girls turned upon me and called me all kinds of vile names, reflecting upon my chastity. I asked them whom they meant and they said me. I then said more frail and dirty creatures than you, there are none like you. Amelia Sisterna then made a rush for me and struck me and knocked me down, then while she was punching me Della pulled my hair and scratched my face. I struggled with them and soon regained my feet and punched back in self defense. They have abused me before and have slandered me repeatedly. On cross examination her testimony was not shaken.

O. N. Cornwall was then called. He stated that he was on Delaware street on the night in question, and saw a rough and tumble fight between some women, but he could not recognize who they were and did not go near them to find out.

Della Sisterna was then called. She stated that she had lived in Berkeley for eighteen years; that on the night of April 3rd she and her sister walked down to the West Berkeley depot to see a lady friend aboard the train, and that as they were returning they saw Amanda Perichina and a gentleman going to the train. As Amanda passed them she turned and laughed in their faces. We paid no attention to her but walked along talking. Amanda overtook us and dipped into our conversation. I had said "Amelia, I wonder why some of these women are always running down the characters of some good girls." Amanda then chipped in and called us all kinds of vile names. Upon being asked to state what the language was, Miss Sisterna stated that she was raised a lady and could not bring herself to repeat the language, it was too vile and such as she had never heard a woman use before in her life.

Amelia Sisterna, in reply to the epithets applied to her by Amanda Perichina, said, I told her that I was no more a woman of that kind than she was and that I could prove who I was, which was more than she could do. She then grabbed me by my tie and tried to choke me and I did nothing to her but tried to shove her away. My sister Dell then came in and separated us and Amanda struck her in the eye. We then walked off and left her and she kept calling us names and dared us to come out into the street singly and fight her but we would not do it. She was never knocked down nor was any violence showed her. There is no animosity between us but we never speak as we pass by. She laughs in my face and insults me whenever she meets me.

Della Sisterna testified to substantially the same thing as her sister. She said that when she went to the rescue of her sister, who was being choked to death, that Amanda Perichina let go and landed her one in the eye. She then went out into the street and called us the vilest kind of names, such as I would not repeat, because it was so low and filthy. She then me, because I was the smallest, to go out into the street and fight her, but I did not go because I knew that I wouldn't be in it with her.

The attorneys on both sides then made their arguments, and the case was given to the jury. They retired, and in about five minutes returned with a verdict of guilty as charged.

The defendants waived time for sentence, and Judge Lord sentenced them to pay a fine of $8 each.

Thus ended a case that has caused quite a lot of excitement in the west end during the past few days.

Judice Fees.

The improved system of auditing claims now employed by Auditor Whidden shows at a glance what different departments of the public service cost. The justice fees for instance on criminal business for February were as follows: Frederick C. Clift, Oakland township, $219; Joseph Pimental, Eden township, $60; Edward Shaw, Berkeley, $180; J. E. Quinn, Eden, $87; S. Sandholdt, Centerville, $63; G. A. Swasey, Alameda, $21; J. H. Taylor, Livermore, $21; E. L. Lawrence, Brooklyn, $77; C. R. Lord, Berkeley, $84; H. T. Morris $75.

OUR POT POURRI

OF LOCAL HAPPENINGS DURING THE LAST TWENTY-FOUR HOURS.

How Marshal Striker was Taken with a Fainting Spell while Looking for Roses.

WHY JOHN BOYD DOES NOT LIKE AN ELEPHANT—BERKELEY BICYCLISTS TO BE ENTERTAINED AT CONCORD THIS EVENING.

Some two or three weeks ago, so the story runs, our esteemed fellow-citizen and friend, John W. Striker, was in quest of a few choice rose trees to add to the already splendid collection which may be seen at any time in the grounds surrounding his palatial mansion. He, it is said, visited several of the nurseries in this vicinity, but for some time met with little or no success. Kind fortune at last directed his footsteps to the nursery of James Martin, the well known horticulturist at Peralta Park. After a thorough inspection of the many beautiful varieties of flowers that Mr. Martin's place is renowned for, Mr. Striker asked to see the roses, and to the rose beds was at once conducted. After examining them and praising them as their respective merits called for, he enquired the names of the different species. "This," said the nurseryman, "is called the Glorie de Dijon, that is the York and Lancaster rose, so called from the fact of its being variegated with the respective colors of those two famous parties; the one you see in the corner is the Marshal Neille, this one is the Ex-Marshall Lord, while this very fine specimen is called the "Marshal Striker." The small rose you see yonder to the right is called the—but his words fell upon unheeding ears, his little joke had proved too much—and the genial John had fainted.

Don't Like Elephants.

John E. Boyd, the wellknown expressman, having fifty cents to spare one day, determined to visit a circus with a menagerie attachment in a neighboring town. Upon his return to "Berkeley the Beautiful" he was asked which animal in the menagerie he was most impressed with. He answered, that he had not determined that point to his own satisfaction as yet, but he added, "I can tell you which animal in the whole collection I have the least love for." "And which animal might that be John?" was then asked. "The elephant," he rejoined. "And why the elephant of all other birds?" was the next inquiry. "Why?" with a merry twinkle, "because he boycotts the poor expressmen and carry's his trunk himself." Before a brickbat could be procured John had vanished.

W. B. Boys' Club.

The Boys' Club of West Berkeley entertained their friends last evening at its club rooms on Addison street. A good number were present and the evening passed seemingly very quick as the different games were played, the different songs were sung and the different way in which the young folks amused themselves from the days of their grandparents.

Mr. Barrows gave the second lecture of a series upon geology. It attracted all so closely that during the whole time taken up by his speaking hardly a whisper was heard.

Immediately after the lecture light refreshments were served and all went home feeling happy not only over the evening's entertainment but with the anticipation that another meeting would be held before long.

What is Coming.

No more shall carking cares of life
Our souls fill with alarm;
No more we'll fume for lack of luck
In mill, or mine, or farm;
No more vile jests, or curses deep,
At the Administration fling,
For joy is in our camp today
And woes go wandering.
Our brows no more with frowns contract
When our bills we have to pay;
No anxious shade will cloud our eyes
When comes the dread rent day;
No more we'll fear the storms of life,
Fickle fortune's frown,
For a friend we have in need at last
The "Herald's" Come

To Town.
No more will Berkeley's Town Trustees
Deadlock when they convene;
No more will dear departing ones
Fear "Styx" the gloomy stream.
And since our friend arrived in town—
(Of course he's come to stay)
Our "devil," to his wonderment,
Has a big increase of pay.
Tom Brotherton no more will lose
His diamond rich and rare;
The dukes will live the corners,
At fair maid's no more will stare,
And reporters on the new GAZETTE
Will hustle up and down,
And present their sheet from being
"Scoop'd," since the "Herald's" Come

To Town.

A Trip Abroad.

By this paragraph the many friends of Mr. J. S. McShane of the late firm of Kennedy & McShane Company of Oakland, who resides on the corner of Channing way and Telegraph avenue, will learn that he is about to leave for a trip to South America where he has interests in extensive coffee plantations. He will be away for several months. It may be remembered that it was on Mr. McShane's return from a trip to Japan that he met R. J. Kennedy, a gentleman well known in Berkeley who induced him to place some of his capital in the dry goods store of Kennedy, Quinlan & Co.

Mr. McShane being thoroughly Irish in his way thought every one of his countrymen was like himself and put $20,000 in the concern. Mr. Kennedy was sent to New York to buy goods and while there it is alleged he, in connection with his wife, assigned his interest to a house in San Francisco for the purpose of taking advantage of the man who had saved him from bankruptcy.

Mr. McShane is quite a young man and has a great deal of push about him and there is no doubt but that with the means he has at his command he will be classed at the head of Berkeley's millionaires. It is to be hoped that he will take an interest in some of the industries hereabouts and give it a jump forward which pluck and capital always successfully accomplishes when once they get into harness.

To Vallejo on a Bicycle.

On Thursday morning last at 6:30 o'clock Frank Thompson and Ralph Putzker strided their wheels and got them in motion for a ride to Vallejo. They quickly got on to the San Pablo road by the way of University avenue and continuing along the old country road made good time to Rodeo, where they rested for awhile. Continuing on their journey they arrived at Vallejo Junction in ample time to take the steamer Amador, which applies as a ferry boat between that point and South Vallejo.

Disembarking at the latter place they again turn the rims and quickly reached Vallejo, which is the home of Mr. Thompson. Their friends were not expecting them and were surprised at their arrival. A table loaded with good things to eat and drink was soon before them. An appetite caused by the long ride made them somewhat ravenous. As soon as their stomachs were well filled they took a spin about town to show the Vallejoites what Berkeleyans could do on the "new wagon."

Thompson, with a sly glance in his eye and both feet on the pedals, quietly gave Putzker the slip by saying he was going a little way out of town to see a friend. Putzker awaited his return anxiously as the minutes flew by. The last boat across the straits at night leaves Vallejo at 4:30. As the minute hand sped towards that point Ralph got still more uneasy and finally concluded to go down to the boat and see Thompson. When he arrived at the end of the wharf the boat had just got underway and Thompson was nowhere to be seen.

Putzker found he was tied to the town for the night so he quietly went to a hotel and registered. During the evening he looked about the place but found but little amusement. A good night's sleep and a hearty breakfast well fitted him for the return trip which he commenced upon at 8 o'clock a. m., and reached Berkeley at 10 o'clock a. m. Here he found Thompson in his new store on Shattuck avenue, who laughed heartily as Ralph entered.

Quite Exciting.

Yesterday afternoon Deputy Constable Murray noticed a man soliciting for C. F. Coler & Co. of New York. Mr. Murray accosted the solicitor and asked him whether he had a license. Upon being answered in the negative he placed the man under arrest. The man refused to go with the officer and the officer took him by the shoulder and attempted to take him to the lock up. The man resisted and soon the officer and solicitor were rolling upon the ground. The officer regained his feet and told his prisoner to get up, which he refused to do. The officer then dragged him along, the man all the time appealing to the bystanders for help, saying that the officer was ill-treating him. Nobody interfered, however, as it was conceded that the officer was using no more force than necessary to take the resisting prisoner to jail.

Constables Fees.

The new fee bill will reduce the revenue of constables to a considerable extent. The claims for February under the old fee bill were as follows: T. G. Brotherton, Berkeley, $101.35; C. M. Day, Alameda, $47.75; J. W. Glaze, Brooklyn, $217.05; J. W. Striker, Berkeley, $98.40; W. J. Ramage, Eden, $135.85; C. J. Newell, Berkeley, $285.80; S. B. Vandervoort, Washington, $172.15; H. W. Von Kapp, Alameda, $98.85; George Wales, Washington, $279.10; J. F. Cronin, $252.75; G. A. Kock, Oakland, $264.05.

A Broken Engine.

The old Splano lies high and dry on the ways at the Oakland railroad yards, and although somewhat weather beaten from her years of service is still sound and tight far beyond what it was expected she would be.

The Solano has been sixteen years in commission, and during all that time she has never been out of the water. Twice a year the barnacles have been scraped from her hull by a kind of submarine scraper, but beyond that she has been practically unrepaiied. As she is out of the water now, however, she will be given a thorough overhauling and it is probable that fully $100,000 will be spent on her before she is again put in the water. Planks are being taken from all over her hull, and the least bit of decayed wood found is scraped out, or the damaged beam is replaced with a new one. It is in the engine-room, however, where the greatest damage has been done, and where the most money for repairs will be spent. The accident which caused the damage was a most peculiar one.

The engine is one of the same kind as are familiar to all ferry-boat travelers, and on the Solano there are two of them, one to drive each paddle. The piston is about sixty inches in diameter, and the engine has a stroke of eleven feet. The piston had just completed its upward stroke when the rod broke off in the socket by which it is attached to the mechanism of the walking beam. Steam, at a pressure of 45 pound to the square inch, had just been admitted above it, and the condenser, adding 13 pounds more pressure, and when the piston struck the lower head it shattered it like glass.

The Orchestral Society.

The attendance at the Orchestral Society's Concert last evening in Shattuck Hall, was just what the GAZETTE predicted it would be. At an early hour the people began to assemble and very quickly the hall was filled with music loving portion of the town. There was considerable dress with the ladies all over the house, which made the view of the assemblage a very handsome one. It is doubtful whether a prettier view has ever before been seen at a public gathering.

The audience was almost immediately in full accord with the performers, and this always has the effect of putting an earnestness into the players which removes any cold feeling.

It was certainly a great success, and very encouraging to the workers.

Berkeley will not be satisfied until there are more of these kind of entertainments placed before them. Concerts of this kind do a great deal towards making efforts combined for a higher class of enjoyment successful. Oftentimes, however, too much time elapses between these public appearances, and this has a tendency to make the interest flag.

Let the good work go on, and though Berkeley may be slow to appreciate, when she once gets a thing established in her mind there will always be a successful issue.

Justice Lawrence has decided that a landlord is not responsible for goods stolen from a lodger's room.

Postmaster-General Wilson has assumed the duties of the office recently vacated by Mr. Bissell.

One of the best indications showing that times are improving in the East is the fact of the commencement of corporations to restore the price of labor to what it was a year ago. Several cases have been chronicled of late to this effect.

Thomas Wilson of West Berkeley will be a candidate for Assessor before the convention which meets this evening. He is a long time resident of the West End and has the full confidence of his neighbors and friends.

Joseph A. Donohue, the San Francisco banker, died yesterday. He has been in close connection with the business affairs of San Francisco for many years, first as a merchant and afterwards as a banker. Everybody always spoke well of him. What better monument is there?

The Independent Taxpayers while in convention this evening should not neglect to insert a plank in their platform in reference to the Valley Railroad.

SPAIN has acceded to the request of the United States and will give the two Americans confined in jail at Cuba a speedy trial and every facility of establishing their innocence.

It now looks as though the fugitive train robber had succeeded in getting to San Francisco, while the officers have been searching for him in Yuba and Colusa counties.

THE Democrats claim that the reason they were defeated at the recent city election in Chicago was because they had no funds. Prior to the campaign over $500,000 were raised but in some way it disappeared before it could be used for election purposes.

THE different nominees for municipal offices should be wise and insert their cards in the columns of the GAZETTE. These will be seen and read by far more people than can be reached by the circulation of personal cards.

We notice that certain candidates for office are having their election printing done in San Francisco. This looks very unwise when the work can be done at home, where the candidate expects to get his votes. Patronize home if you desire home patronage.

It is rumored that Will Schmidt intends holding a convention at West Berkeley to nominate trustees for the Sixth and Seventh wards. He calls it the People's Convention. The convention, after nominating trustees, will then endorse such other candidates as it may see fit from the other tickets in the field.

JOHN W. ROCKFELLER and the directors of the Standard Oil Company, who were recently indicted in Texas, have now been declared fugitives from justice as they have entered and departed from Texas since the indictments were found. The Attorney-General of Texas states that this makes them fugitives from justice and that now Governor Morton can no longer refuse the Governor's requisition.

THE double suicide of a young lady and her husband, of a few hours, at the Palace Hotel yesterday, has brought forth once more the family skeleton of the Wolf family, which has several times been paraded before the San Francisco public. The young lady and her husband could not get parental consent to their marriage so they got married without it and then died in each others arms. It seems as though they might have braved the parents' displeasure after they had married, but the young man was poor and the young lady rich, so they preferred to die so that there could be no danger of their being parted.

OSCAR WILDE, the aesthetic gentleman who upon his visit to America some years ago had the upper ten of New York at his feet, has turned out to be a most degraded and miserable piece of humanity. In his endeavor to crush the Marquis of Queensbury the evidence against himself was so revolting that the jury at once brought in a verdict of not guilty against the man he desired to crush, and the Court compelled Wilde to pay the costs of the trial, which will amount to many dollars. Wilde was immediately afterwards arrested on the strength of his own evidence, for crimes against nature, and may spend a portion of his life behind the prison bars at hard labor. There is no doubt now but what his photographs, sunflowers and all will disappear from the fashionable drawing rooms of New York.

WHO AND WHAT THEY ARE.

On Monday next and from day to day the GAZETTE will have gone over the list of nominees of all the conventions, we shall publish a brief description of the candidates running for the various offices, thereby letting each and everyone of our citizens know who is in the field and allowing them to choose which ones they desire to vote for. Each and every convention will put forward their very best men, and the result will be that the voters of Berkeley will have a chance to choose from the best material in the town, and thus in the event of the election of the nominees of any of the parties the town will not be injured but benefitted.

THE INDEPENDENTS.

There is a great deal of interest manifested in what the Independent Taxpayers Convention will do this evening. It is thought by the majority of people that it will endorse the most of the nominees of the Non-Partisan Convention and this belief is shared by the GAZETTE. The candidates as put forward by the Non-Partisans are above reproach and fully represent the different portions of the town, and it would not harm the Independents one particle to endorse them. Of course there may be one or two on the ticket who have never trained with the Independents, who may be displaced for members of the Taxpayers party but this should not matter as what is wanted is good government and progressive government under the new charter and we believe that in any event whether the Non-Partisan ticket is endorsed or whether a new ticket is placed in the field, such officers will be elected.

Albin Valabregue, the French dramatist, is a trifle eccentric. He has just published a book entitled "A Philosopher of the Twentieth Century."

The New York Mercury is raising funds by a popular subscription to erect in this city a statue of Patrick Sarsfield Gilmore, the deceased bandmaster.

Richard Stahl, who wrote the music to "The Sea King," is dramatizing "The Heavenly Twins." The twins themselves are to be the chief feature, and there will be much music in the play.

CONNECTS TWO SEAS.

THE GREAT BALTIC CANAL IS NEARLY COMPLETED.

To Be Formally Opened With Great Festivities the First Week in June—It Is Expected to Revolutionize the Commerce of Northern Europe.

It is a big ditch that the Germans are just completing between Brunsbuttel, on the river Elbe, a few miles from the North sea, and Kiel, on the Baltic, but in some respects this canal, although a very big one and destined to be of great importance both in the commercial and the naval future of Europe, is not so much of a thing as the canal now being dug for the double purpose of carrying away the sewage of Chicago and furnishing a means of navigation between the great lakes and the Mississippi.

The Baltic canal is 62 miles long, while the Chicago canal proper will reach only about 30 miles, but counting the improvements along the Illinois river that will virtually be an extension of the navigable channel its total length will be about 820 miles. In some places the German channel will be 328 feet wide at the surface, but its general width will be only 299 feet, while the general width of the Chicago ditch is 306 feet at the surface in all but the rock cuttings, and its width at the bottom is everywhere 160 feet, or considerably in excess of the bottom width of the canal between Brunsbuttel and Kiel. The cost of the Chicago canal will be somewhat greater than that of the German one, just how much will not be apparent, however, according to all American precedents, until the work is completed. It may be set down as certain that the big ditch in Illinois will cost more money than the estimates call for, but the German channel, we are assured, will be finished at an expense well within the original estimate of $39,000,000.

BALTIC CANAL AND CONNECTED SEAS.

nals will cost more money than the estimates call for, but the German channel, we are assured, will be finished at an expense well within the original estimate of $39,000,000.

It seems certain, too, that the Baltic canal will be finished by the time set by the engineers, and all Germany is now preparing to celebrate its opening during the first week in June. Hamburg, Kiel and every town and village lying along the line will be brilliant with flags and alive with visitors during the festivities. Before the formal opening Emperor William, in his yacht, followed by a squadron of German warships, will make a tour of official inspection, and every nation in the world possessed of a navy worth mentioning will make it a point to be represented by some of its very best ships. Just what the United States will do in this direction has not yet been fully decided upon, and there has been considerable discussion as to how big our naval display shall be.

The importance of the new canal from every standpoint can hardly be overestimated. When it is finished, German men-of-war can pass from one sea to the other without sailing through foreign waters, and it will then be possible quickly to concentrate the entire German navy upon either the north or the west coast. To the merchant marine the new channel will be hardly less important. The saving in time and distance will be very considerable. For ships plying between the Baltic and points south of Hull the new course will be 288 miles shorter than the old one. Bremen ships will save 322 miles and Hamburg ships 424, but a still greater gain will be made in respect of safety, for the passage between Jutland, the northernmost part of Denmark and the Scandinavian peninsula, which is now the only available one for vessels in the Baltic sea trade, is counted one of the most dangerous in Europe, more than 200 crafts being annually lost upon its treacherous coasts. The new canal stretches across the Prussian province of Holstein. Along nearly its entire course the soil is favorable to canal building, although in some places it has been found difficult to make a good bed, because of boggy and marshy ground. But nowhere have the builders of this canal encountered any such abnormal formations of land or rock or such rushing torrents as confronted those who undertook the Panama canal or such treacherous sand as had to be overcome by De Lesseps in excavating the Suez canal. At no place is the soil more than 80 feet above the sea level, and therefore it has not been necessary to construct locks at any point excepting at each end.

These locks form a very important and costly feature of the Baltic canal. Their construction has been necessary because of the differences between the tide levels of the two connected seas. The lock at the Baltic end will not have to be used more than 25 or 30 times a year, since the rise and fall of the tide upon the Baltic is very slight. The rise and fall of the North sea tide, however, is so great that but for the lock the depth of water in the canal would vary from 10 to 27½ feet. The lock at Brunsbuttel will therefore have to be kept closed most of the time.

The two locks are the largest in the world, with the exception of that at Bremerhaven, near the river Weser's mouth. Each consists of two chambers, parallel and contiguous. Each chamber has an available length of 492 feet and a width of 82 feet. Since the North German Lloyd's largest transatlantic steamers are but 468 feet long and 52 feet wide, and the largest ironclad in the present German navy is 380 long and 64 feet wide, it will be seen that the lock capacity is amply sufficient for the largest craft that will be called to pass through the canal, while several steamers and sailing ships of ordinary size can readily pass together.

It was about 600 years ago that the scheme for this canal was first broached, but it was not until 1878 that the first definite plans were made. For years after that the project languished on account of the opposition of the military authorities of the empire. But in 1886 the venerable Emperor William, Prince Bismarck and General von Moltke each gave adherence to the plan, and shortly thereafter the bill for the canal's construction was passed by the Reichstag. On June 8, 1887, the work was formally inaugurated by the present emperor's grandfather.

The people of Hamburg have been more enthusiastic about this canal than those of any other city, since they believe that it will make their town the supply depot of all northern Europe, as some one has said, a veritable "Chicago on the Elbe," but there are others who think Hamburg will be the port of St. Louis to speak, to the Chicago of Kiel, which will really become the distributing point, and the people of Kiel are among those who hold this view.

ALL READY.

He bought a large umbrella
With satisfaction grim.
Likewise a life preserver bag
In case he'd have to swim.
He bought a diamond star that held
A hundred stones or so,
A pair of snowshoes for his feet
In case that it should snow.
A book of modern slang he got
And learned it page by page,
And then he was equipped to go
Upon the modern stage.

QUEER ADVERTISEMENTS.

Some of the Remarkable Announcements That Appear in Austrian Papers.

Austrian matrimonial advertisements, according to a contemporary's correspondent at Vienna, are marked by an acceptable humorous audacity. Here, for instance, is one that ran for six or seven days: "Wanted.—A rich lady, no matter how old, who will finance a student of medicine until such time as he obtains his degree, when he engages to marry his benefactress."

And another is quoted wherein a young prince seeks a handsome girl with a dowry of not less than £250,000.

When the desired mate is obtained, all one's needs are apparently satisfied, judging from this advertisement for a purchaser for "a well trained monkey, a talkative parrot and a beautiful sympathetic cat," which belongs to a lady, who, owing to her approaching marriage, has no further use for them.

The most amusing of the advertisements quoted by our contemporary is, however, that of the very Irish perukier, who makes wigs for "men of intellect, philosophers, scholars and politicians, whose severe mental labor in the cause of humanity has filled their brains with genial ideas, while depriving their heads of their natural capillary envelopes." These "artistically finished wigs," the advertiser continues, "while extremely useful and highly ornamental to the wearer, are guaranteed absolutely invisible to the spectator. They can be seen any day in my private showrooms."

A Fraudulent Banker.

The other evening a stylish and gentlemanly looking individual stepped into one of the leading restaurants in Paris, took his seat at a table and ordered a dinner tres recherche. When it was served up, he tackled the dishes with the placid delight of a genuine epicure. When he was half way through the dessert, a closed cab drew up at the door of the establishment, and a very grave looking gentleman requested permission to look through the premises, as he expected to find there a fraudulent banker, whom he as a detective was instructed to take into custody. Of course his demand was complied with, and no sooner had he entered the dining room than he pointed to the luxurious reveler and whispered in the landlord's ear: "You see, our information was correct. There he is. But for your own sake we prefer to avoid a row. Please tell the gentleman that his friend Baron L. is outside and wishes to speak to him for half a minute."

On receiving the message our gastronomist immediately rose from the table and went out on the boulevard, where he was taken possession of by the detective, who put him into the cab and drove off with him. Next day the restaurant keeper went to the nearest police office to recover payment for the "fraudulent banker's" dinner, amounting to about 60 francs. But neither the commissary nor his subordinates knew anything of the supposed capture. In the end it turned out to be nothing more or less than a clever bit of comedy got up for the purpose of enabling one of the actors to have "a good blowout."—Figaro.

Astonishing an Oriental.

Mohammed Abu Said, "Chief Spoon and Ladle Maker to the Commander of the Faithful," came to know what Owen thought about the phenix and whether the bowl of a ladle which he brought with him for examination was not made from the beak of that bird. It was identified as coming from a more authentic source—the helmeted hornbill of Ceylon, of which there was fortunately a specimen in the museum. "The head and beak were brought in to my study and handed to the oriental. He examined it very deftly, comparing the beak with the bowl, and then exclaimed, with astonishment and reverence: 'God is great. That surely is the bird!'"—Academy.

Frozen Milk.

The French industry of icing milk is an original departure in tinne commodities. The milk is frozen and placed in block form in tins and on the part of the purchaser requires to be melted previous to use. Being hermetically sealed, the commodity thus iced preserves its form until it is required, when a minute's exposure to the sun's rays or to the heat of the fire is all that is necessary to reduce it to a liquid condition.—Baltimore Sun.

To Remove Ink Stains.

Ink stains on carpets or woollen goods can be removed while they are fresh by taking common baking soda or saleratus, rubbing it well into the spots and then rinsing with warm water. The same process will remove dried ink spots from cotton goods if the spot has not been wet with water before the saleratus is applied.—Jewelers' Circular.

Why She Did.

Husband.—For heaven's sake, what makes you talk so much?
Wife (pleasantly).—You do, love. I have to keep talking so you will not have so many opportunities to say rude things.—Detroit Free Press.

"The Campbells Are Comin'" is a very old Scottish air. Copies of it, dating back to 1820, are known to exist.

Among the curios unearthed at Troy by Dr. Schliemann were several golden lamps dating from 900 B. C.

OFFICE OF THE GAZETTELETS.

Leave your orders for the Berkeley Steam Laundry at Kelley's Drug Store.

The Call is full of newspaper surprises. On opening it we wonder what is coming next.

At a recent meeting of some gentlemen who occasionally come together and discuss general matters, the question arose as to whether it would be a good idea to annex Oakland to Berkeley, that the former place might have the benefits of a good and cheap government. It will be the subject of more extended remarks at a later date.

Prof Holden of Mount Hamilton may be a shining light in the astronomical world, but it is an easy bet that Billy Such (who for geniality and general uprightness might well be called nonesuch) could give him cards, spades and little casino and then beat him to a finish in furnishing information regarding the "milky way."

Much talk is being indulged in concerning the gold coins coming from the Carson Mint. Cranks complain and say the color is too light and has a silvery appearance. It is natural to the State to have more of the look of silver than gold and that should be one of the best of reasons for the coin being worth all that is marked upon the face of it.

Mrs. Catherine Quinn died in San Francisco from peritonitis. Dr. R. S. Macbeth has been arrested on account of it. An inquest will be held on Monday when all the facts concerning the fatal result will be brought out. In the meantime the doctor will be locked up. He has secured Robert Ferrall as attorney.

Dr. C. Buckley, formerly a resident of this town, is said to have discovered a process by which all decay of either vegetable or animal matter may be arrested. In fact anything which it surrounds will remain ever afterward in the same state as when first in contact with the fluid. It tends to purify all matter. The only set back the invention has that has fallen under notice is the attempt to purify the character of some Berkeley visitors. Well, it does not seem to accomplish the object. Elsewhere it has been tried on poultry and lamb. No apparent change occurred in four weeks.

E. A. Cavallier, proprietor of the Golden Gate Supply Company, keeps up with the times. Always a good quality of hay and grain on hand. The coal he keeps in the shape of black diamonds. Read his ad.

Specially Invited.

Bicyclists Frank McClain, Chester Liden and C. W. Klein mounted their wheels this morning just as the University clock was striking the hour of nine. Taking two or three spins making a circle, after the style of a game of croquet, they darted down University avenue. Their destination to day is Concord, Contra Costa County, where they will visit some friends.

This evening they will be tendered a reception by the bicyclists of the town and a banquet is to follow to which the hosts, guests and a few invited friends will sit down. Music by a quartette band of the town will enliven the company. The bicycle fever is running pretty high and everybody rides a "cycle that can get a wheel. It affords a cheap and good exercise. May there be much joy with our friends.

THE FASHION PLATE.

White linen collars, both standing and turned over, are seen on colored shirt waists, while the cuffs are colored like the shirt.

The fanatical little cape is with us still and is likely to remain in fashion so long as the sleeves keep their present condition of fullness.

The new hosiery is prettily embroidered on the instep with tiny flowers of various kinds; also with clocks up the side and openwork patterns as well.

Black and white striped taffetas, organdies and swivel silks will be much worn this season, and they make extremely stylish gowns, combined with a trimming of bright satin or velvet to give the dress a touch of color.

Black and colored velvet waists are to be worn with black satin, moire and wool skirts for street gowns as soon as it is warm enough to discard the cape. They are made in blouse fashion, and, to give them extra warmth, a flannel lining is substituted for silk.—New York Sun.

SUCCESSOR TO DE GIERA.

Prince Lobanoff-Rostovski, Russia's Newly Appointed Foreign Minister.

The appointment of Prince Lobanoff-Rostovski to the ministry of foreign affairs in the Russian government instead of M. de Staal, whose name was first sent out in connection with the place, is spoken of in some quarters as a decidedly anti-English, anti-French movement on the part of the young czar. Prince Lobanoff is a little past 60 and has long been prominent in European diplomacy. For the last 11 years he has represented the Russian government at Vienna. Before that for a short time he was stationed in London, before that was attached to the ministry of the interior at St. Petersburg and yet previous to that was Russian minister at Constantinople.

It will be seen from all this that he must be very well posted indeed in the politics of the continent, and his sentiments will be understood when it is stated that he considers Vienna the ideal center of diplomacy. He is, in short, a stout advocate of the triple alliance of Russia, Germany and Austria and is understood to have been somewhat out of favor during the reign of the late czar because he could not or would not conceal his opinion that Russia's persecution of Bulgaria was stupid and the "flirtation" with the republic of France filled with danger. It is predicted that the coming few months will witness such a "love feast of kaisers" as has not taken place since 1875, and that the object of it all will be to crush the growing popular movement in each of the three great European empires.

Prince Lobanoff-Rostovski is of very ancient family—he boasts openly that it is as old and as honorable as that of the Romanoffs themselves. The name Lobanoff is derived from an early ancestor who was surnamed Loban because of his high forehead and Rostovski from the old town of Rostov, where the Lobanoffs were for generations reigning princes.

Lobanoff's appointment will be pleasing at Rome, for he is particularly "persona grata" with the Vatican, as was shown last winter by his being deputed personally to convey to the pope the intelligence that the czar had breathed his last.

LADY MARY MONTAGUE.

The Death of This Beautiful Young Girl Brings Many Notorious Persons to Mind.

The recent death of Lady Jaqueline Mary Alva Montague, one of the twin daughters of the late Duke of Manchester and his American wife, nee Yznaga, and the removal of the body from Civita Vecchia, Italy, on the yacht of Mr. William K. Vanderbilt, again brings into notice a group of persons whose doings have been the subject of unending gossip for several years. This group includes the late duke, LADY MARY AND LADY ALICE MONTAGUE, who was Lord Mandeville when he married Miss Yznaga, young Yznaga, the brother of the duchess who married beautiful Miss Wright, now in Yankton, S. D., seeking a divorce, the "Willie K. Vanderbilt," whose marital troubles have been much aired of late, and some others.

It is doubtful if the life of any of these persons has been more unsavory than was that of the father of the young girl who has just died. His dissipation was of the wildest sort and they were known of all men, for he was at no pains whatever to conceal them. It is only fair to state, however, that no stain of any sort attached to his wife, who even had the sympathy of her husband's mother in all the differences that arose between herself and the duke.

The twin daughters—the living one is Lady Alice Eleanor Louise Montague—were noted wherever they were known for their beauty, their cleverness and their excellent health. Not yet 18, it seemed before the death of the Lady Mary that no two girls in the world had brighter prospects. To their training their mother has always given the most careful attention and her methods have been the subject of much favorable comment, while their father was very fond and proud of them and generally managed to behave himself respectably when at Tanderagee castle, Ireland, which was the favorite family home while he was alive.

Of the girls themselves many stories have been told as to their excellent shooting and their expert horsemanship. It is even stated that they have often ventured to ride bareback while sojourning at the Tanderagee estate. There is a son, the present Duke of Manchester, now just 18, besides the surviving twin. The Duchess of Manchester is a great favorite at Sandingham, both the Prince and Princess of Wales having embraced every opportunity to render courtesies to her. Until her son becomes of age the duchess will retain control of the estate and the patronage of the six church livings belonging to the dukedom—that is to say, she has the appointment of the clergy of six parishes and so is virtually responsible for the spiritual welfare of their residents. The dukedom is by no means a rich one, as the excesses of the late duke entailed the expenditure of really vast sums of money.

Lucky Poor Relations.

Poor relations have rarely had such a windfall as that reported from Bordeaux. It is stated that a merchant in the said town died intestate and without any direct descendants. His fortune, amounting to 23,000,000 francs, or $4,400,000, is accordingly to be divided among a certain number of humble families, the members of which live in Cognac and Jarnac. Among those entitled to shares in the estate are two barbers, a cooper, a shoemaker and several laborers, all of whom were distantly related to the rich merchant of Bordeaux.

France's Madagascar Expedition.

It has been found that fully 15 per cent of the men drafted for the Madagascar expedition are physically unfit for the arduous service, and their places are being filled. Already it is apparent that the campaign will cost $85,000,000 instead of $13,000,000.

THE FRENCH PRESIDENT'S WIFE.

Mme. Felix Faure Is a Home Body and Has Been a Great Help to Her Husband.

It was nearly 80 years ago, on July 10, 1865, that Felix Faure, the same who is now president of the republic of France, was married to Mlle. Mathilde Belluot, daughter of a solicitor and niece to Senator Guinot of Ambloise, in the department of Indre-et-Loire. She was then a brilliant brunette, with sparkling coal black eyes and raven hair. Today, although now some two or three and fifty, she still is a handsome woman. Perhaps she owes the preservation of her good looks, in part at least, to the interesting fact that her home life has always been a pleasant one. At all events it is generally understood in Paris that her husband is as devoted to her as she is to him, and that the utmost concord has always been maintained between them.

With her acquaintances Mme. Faure is very popular. She is exceedingly clever, even brilliant, and her conversation is said to sparkle with witty sayings, but notwithstanding this she is never sarcastic and does not enjoy shining at some one else's expense. This renders her an unusually agreeable hostess, and no doubt will be found of special advantage to her as mistress of the Elysee palace. But it is not alone in a social way that her talents have been of value, for it is said that she has often turned them to good account in assisting her husband—in fact, that he owes very much of his success in life to her aid and her sympathy.

Two daughters have been born to M. and Mme. Faure—Lucile and Antoinette. Mlle. Lucile is now 35 years of age and still single. Her father is exceedingly fond of this young woman, and with good reason, according to all accounts, for she is witty, ambitious, clever and a writer of very creditable verses. She seems to have completely captivated the boulevardiers, who have come habitually to speak of her as "Mlle. Lucifer," and the popularity of the president has no doubt been augmented greatly by the report that he advises with his clever daughter quite as often as he does with his wife.

The younger daughter is the wife of M. Rene Berge, conseiller general of the Seine-Inferieure, a very rich young engineer, who, because of his wealth, does not practice his profession, but does give much attention to agriculture and cattle raising and is often to be seen with his youthful and pretty wife in Elysee circles.

WHISKY TRUST REORGANIZER.

General John McNulta Born in New York, Though of Scotch-Irish Descent.

Though a native of New York, where he was born some 58 years ago, General John McNulta, the successful reorganizer of the Whisky trust, is of Scotch-Irish descent, his father having been born in the north of Ireland, and his father—the general's grandfather—in Scotland.

When John was but a lad of 15, he ran away from school and home with two boyish comrades. His friends soon tired of roving and returned penitently to their parents, but he was made of sterner stuff, and remained away until he was able to return as a man well established in life. His original plan included a trip by canal-boat and steamer from Toledo, via Cincinnati, to the plantation of a friend who resided near the mouth of the Red river in Mississippi, but the young traveler was taken dangerously ill before reaching Cincinnati and was tenderly cared for by the captain of the canalboat on which he was traveling and taken to the navigator's own home at Attica, Ind., until recovery. When he got well, young McNulta went to work as a general utility boy in a hotel, where he soon won promotion.

In 1856 he became a traveling man, and, by the time the civil war broke out, had settled down in business for himself at Bloomington, Ill. Shortly after the opening of hostilities he enlisted in the northern army and was commissioned captain on May 3, 1861. Before the war was over he had risen to the rank of colonel and at its close was given the brevet rank of brigadier general.

Then he was admitted to the bar at Bloomington, where he soon got into politics. In 1868 he was elected to the Illinois state senate and served four terms. In 1879 he was sent to Washington as a representative in congress. As an organizer he has always stood extremely well in Illinois, his work first on the Clover Leaf railroad system and afterward on the Wabash being of the highest order. On the latter he established the famous "cent a mile military rate," thus winning the gratitude of G. A. R. men the country over. In Bloomington he was ever foremost in matters of public spirit. He is a Presbyterian, a G. A. R. man, a member of the Loyal Legion and the Illinois Bar association. His wife was Miss Laura Fulton, and there are three sons and one daughter. The family will henceforth reside in Chicago.
